

HOW TO GET INTO THE GERMAN JOB MARKET

A WORKSHOP FOR INTERNATIONAL POST-DOCS AND PHD CANDIDATES

DR. PHILIPPA COOK works as a trainer with a focus on international PhD-candidates and PhD-holders. Philippa was born and raised in England, and worked in research and teaching in German academia for almost two decades. For this workshop, she has conducted numerous case studies of international PhD-holders in the non-academic job market. She draws on these experiences to motivate and guide participants.

DR. ANNE LÖCHTE is what you might call a “Biodeutsche”, but she has lived, studied and worked in England and Canada. She works as a coach and career consultant with a focus on the transfer of PhD-holders into the non-academic job market. The workshop concept builds on her 10-plus years of experience in this field.

CONTENT

For PhD-holders with an international background, it can be a real challenge to get into the German job market. The entry routes are unclear, they are not aware of the unwritten rules of the game, and many can't offer German language skills.

IN THIS WORKSHOP PARTICIPANTS

- learn the vital facts about possibilities and challenges that international PhD-holders face on the German job market
- create their own qualification-based profile and develop ideas about different career options
- are inspired to let their international background strengthen their profile
- will be empowered by case-studies of international PhD-holders who have already successfully entered the German job-market

LANGUAGE: English

PARTICIPANTS: max. 12, all disciplines

DURATION: 2 days
